The Whistling Toad.

In the Caribbean islands there is a toad that whistles. The creature is common to the mountains, indulges in its musical practice mostly at night, and woe to the person who tries to sleep in its vicinity. Mme. Toad perches on top of a tree fern close to your window and begins her serenade. She whistles a couple of hundred stanzas that smite the eardrum like thunder. Travelers, who, have experienced the "music" of the whistling toad say that the only way to obtain a wink of sleep when once Mme. Toad tupes up is to put your tend under the pillow or stop up your ears with cotton.

Animal Swimmers.

The elephant is a good swimmer, and the wild animals of the cat family, the tiger, the panther, the jaguar and others, do not hesitate to cross lakes and days, including date of sale, $6.80. rivers. On the other hand, the domestic cat shrinks from immersion and drowns quickly. The nostrils of some small animals are so placed as to render breathing very difficult when they are in the water. Among these are mice and rabbits, which will drown without sinking beneath the surface. Rats are excellent swimmers.

Almost all birds except those which are distinctly natatorial are nearly helpless in water. Small birds in particular have no power of propulsion, and, though they do not sink, they drown quickly. Even many species of waterfowl rise from the water with difficulty or not at all when their wings are wet. After a sea gull plunges and returns to the surface it stretches American Tobacco company's local its wings so that they may be dried by the wind and sun before it attempts to Monkeys and Water.

Monkeys never wash or bathe though they have, as a rule, every chance to do so. Possibly experience has taught them to be afraid of crocodiles, which are pretty generally distributed on monkey haunted rivers. It is said that a number of Indian mona boat who washed their hands and brushed their teeth. Next day the monkeys were seen to come to the riverside and go through the form of washing their hands and of brushing their teeth with bits of stick.-Nature.

In the days of his management at the Winter garden in New York Edwin Booth received a letter from a clergyman saying that he wished to see Booth in his principal parts, but desired, if possible, to be admitted into the theater by a side door, as he did not care to run any risk of being seen by his parishioners entering from the front. Edwin Booth made answer in these words: "Sir, there is no door in my theater through which God cannot
